Platinum Electrical owner Joshua Nicholls and staff relax after winning their Telstra Business Award.

A young Blacktown company has topped thousands of others to win a national business award.

After taking out the state Panasonic Business Award for companies with 20 to 50 staff, Platinum Electrical has won the national title at the Telstra Business Awards on Friday September 21.

Owner Joshua Nicholls said he was stoked to win what he called 'the biggie', especially because his company was just six-years-old.

"They were all very honourable businesses. To win against them was quite an honour," he said. Although the 28-year-old said he couldn't help feeling quietly confident knowing how well the business operated.

The award-winning company specialises in electrical installations, repairs and maintenance.

It was the first business to use wireless pen-pads and job sheet details for quick response times.

"It encourages us because all our systems have been recognised as the best in Australia," the Kellyville Ridge resident said.

He applauded his hardworking and committed team, "who are dedicated to the vision of the company".
